We all like recognition for a job well done. And even more, we like being rewarded for doing well. As organizations continue to vie for a shrinking workforce, recognition and rewards become an ever more important tool in driving results that benefit all concerned.

This webcast, led by Jennifer Barton, SPHR, Willis North America's Employee Benefits National Practice Leader for HR Consulting, will address ways companies are using recognition and rewards to increase employee engagement and improve corporate results. Jennifer will talk about the design and budgeting process, as well as communications and reward types. This seminar will help organizations develop a recognition program that will make a positive impact on both the employee's work experience and the company's performance.

Learn how an effective rewards program can:

- Be a valuable tool for recruiting and retaining qualified employees
- Impact your healthcare spending
- Serve as a catalyst for improving employee engagement and contributions towards organizational goals
- Positively impact morale and loyalty to your organization
